24 ANNUAL SPORT NITE MAKES BIG NEWS

8,500 EXPECTED TO SEE
1958 SPORT NITE EDITION

For five nights, beginning March 17, Trenton Central High School's 24th annual Sports Nite will play to more than 8,500 spectators.

The 1,400 girls of the high school, equally divided into two groups - Red Team and Black Team - will present original songs, dance routines (from tap to ballet), modern exercises, games, cheer and music.

Most of the numbers are competitive, and excitement is one of the ingredients of this unique, colorful show, which, in the ever present opinion of showmen like Paul Whiteman, perennial spectator at Sports nite, deserves such descriptions as "musical extravaganza," "slightly terrific and tuneful," and "magna cum breathless."

A conservative estimate places the number of people who have seen Sports Nite since its inception in 1935, at 90,000 the pupils who have participated, 20,000. Every phase of the show is homecreated and home-made.

Instituted by the late Dr. Paul R. Spencer, the show has been "scouted" by representatives of dozens of school systems over the years and has the pattern for many similar sports nights.

Once again Trenton High's annual Sport Nite spectacular draws near.

A Day in The Press Room

Chairman—Hinda Roth

The corner newsboy enters the Times Building to replenish his supply of papers, and is overwhelmed by the noise and seeming confusion of the press room.

He notices the editor, distraught because the paper lacks a headline story.

Intrigued with these happenings, the lad finds himself at the sports desk, and is carried off to a world of fantasy wherein he is the hero of sporting events.

Leaving this dream, he becomes fascinated with comic sections, and is spirited to the zany times of L'il Abner.

His dreams are rudely shattered by the rush of the workers to the ticker tape, which is clicking out the headline story that enables the paper to go to press.

Soon left alone with his papers, the little boy goes whistling off, amazed at the complexities of today's newspapers.
